

Date: Sun, 16 Dec 2007 02:20:17 +0000 (GMT)
From: "Eric Van Hove" <evh_transcribe@yahoo.com>
Subject: Re: from T-Yong Chung
To: "Eric Van Hove" <evh_transcribe@yahoo.com>

chung deuk-yong wrote:

Dear Eric,

The Idea is to have people contribute in the re-creation of the design book, Designing the 21st Century, by making in their own unique codes in the page they have selected.

Each participants leaves a mark or code in the book that is placed within the locker; The book is transformed by the act of each participants, through their personalised markings or codes written in the pages, and the book will be re-created as a whole new concept book.

The book: "Designing the 21st Century"
(published by Taschen/Edited by Charlotte and Peter Fiell)
Color Markers, glue, instructions

How it works:

- Participants pick a color marker.
- After looking through the book, the participants pick out a page they like the most then add their personal code in the page (e.g. drawings, words, or anything they wish)
- They express your own code VISUALLY in the chosen page.
- The participant put the book back in the locker.

All the best
T-yong